Rare books. University Archives. Digital Exhibits. By the time the Byers first set foot in the Soviet Union however, a civil war had already erupted in China between the nationalist Kuomintang government and the Communist Party of China. Having begun in 1927, the Chinese Civil War coincided very closely with the first five-year plan, which began a year later in 1928. By Harry's arrival in 1930, the situation on both sides of the border was already beginning to rapidly deteriorate. In the entry below, Harry notes the climbing prices of food in the nearby Chinese market in Nikolsk (now Ussuriysk) "Oh I Wish We Were Home." September 16, 1930. Not long after its shut-down, Harry begins writing about their constant state of hunger and lack of available food, entry after entry. Roles at home. Every year, Special Collections & University Archives staff work together to create relevant and interesting exhibits on topics that are of interest to the University, the community, and to scholars. This exhibit demonstrates the importance of viewing American Civil War history through the lens of women's and gender history; to illustrate the particularities of living within the "border state" of Maryland; and to promote a deeper understanding of how historical documents are preserved, used, and interpreted. In addition, the exhibition showcases some of the University Librar Home's Civil War Resources. Encyclopedias, Dictionaries, Handbooks ETC.: Encyclopedias, dictionary and handbooks are a good starting point for any research project. Using the Advanced search type "civil war" in the first box and a particular battle, topic, or personal name in the second box.
