Baseball Spring Training Locations:

Glendale Stadium

In 2009, Dodgers spring training and White Sox spring training moved to Glendale Stadium. This state-of-the-art ballpark is the largest of the AZ baseball spring training locations with 13,500 seats, 14 practice fields and even a 2-acre lake.

Goodyear Ballpark

As of 2009, the Cleveland Indians returned to Arizona spring training baseball, playing at the new Goodyear Ballpark. This became a two-team park when Cincinnati Reds spring training moved to Goodyear in 2010. The $108 million stadium has 10,000 seats, ample parking and even public art.

Hohokam Stadium

Home to Chicago Cubs spring training, this is the place to catch spring training fever. Loyal Cubs fans make every game a fun experience along with the Cactus League's only organist. Get your tickets early because these games sell out fast. Cubs schedule

Maryvale Baseball Park

This large, award-winning park is the spring home of the Milwaukee Brewers. It's not the fanciest Arizona spring training site but the 56-acre complex holds 8,000 fans and generally is not crowded. Special Brewers touches include sausage-costumed mascots, Milwaukee beer and their "secret sauce".

Peoria Sports Complex

The Peoria Complex, home to the Seattle Mariners spring training and San Diego Padres spring training, was the first of the Arizona baseball spring training locations to host two teams. It's a fan favorite for its spacious, family-friendly stadium and nearby restaurants, shops and entertainment.

Phoenix Municipal Stadium

Home to the Oakland A's, this family-friendly Arizona spring training baseball stadium has a nice grassy picnic area, shaded seating, and a good selection of microbrewed beers. Pre- or post-game, explore nearby Papago Park, which has hiking trails, picnic areas, a firefighting museum and the Phoenix Zoo.

Scottsdale Stadium

See Giants spring training at Scottsdale Stadium and you'll get the most upscale spring training experience in all of the Cactus League. A "see and be seen" crowd, happy hour atmosphere and diverse food and drink make for party time at one of the most popular baseball spring training locations.

Surprise Stadium

This family-friendly stadium is a two team park, hosting both the Kansas City Royals and the Texas Rangers. It's spacious and has great amenities including grassy lawn seating, a merry-go-round in the right field concourse and plenty of free parking.

Tempe Diablo Stadium

Diablo Stadium is the home of Los Angeles Angels of Anaheim. It's a great spot to catch an Arizona spring training baseball game because its centrally located, easily reached, comfortable and spacious, has great hot dogs and scenic views of the Tempe Buttes.

Salt River Fields at Talking Stick

This is the newest of the AZ baseball spring training locations. Both the Diamondbacks and Rockies share this stadium set on the Salt River Pima-Maricopa Indian Community east of Phoenix, making them the first MLB teams to have a spring training site on Native American lands.
