Vegetarian children can reap a number of benefits from going green, but they need your help ensuring a balanced diet. Here's how to pull it off. As a good parent, you are no doubt wondering if your child is getting all the essentials. Let's look at the nutrients parents worry about most: Protein: There is plenty of protein in grains, vegetables, beans, and bean products (e.g., tofu, soy milk). And they do not need to be eaten in any special combinations; a normal variety of these foods, consumed over the course of a day, provides all the protein a growing child needs. Calcium: Green leafy vegetables and legumes—or "greens and beans," for short—are rich in calcium. Vegetarianism is a popular choice for many individuals and families. But parents may wonder if kids can safely follow a vegetarian diet and still get all necessary nutrients. Most dietary and medical experts agree that a well-planned vegetarian diet can actually be a very healthy way to eat. But special care must be taken when serving kids and teens a vegetarian diet, especially if it doesn't include dairy and egg products. And as with any diet, you'll need to understand that the nutritional needs of kids change as they grow. Types of Vegetarian Diets. Before your child or family swi
