De La Démocratie en Amérique (French pronunciation: [dÉ™la demÉ™kÉasi É™fnâ€žameÉ™Éik]; published in two volumes, the first in 1835 and the second in 1840) is a classic French text by Alexis de Tocqueville. Its title translates as On Democracy in America, but English translations are usually simply entitled Democracy in America. In the book, Tocqueville examines the democratic revolution that he believed had been occurring over the previous several hundred years. To support impartial, credible election observation, The Carter Center, in cooperation with the U.N. Electoral Assistance Division and the National Democratic Institute, produced the Declaration of Principles for International Observation, which established professional guidelines for election observation. The declaration has been endorsed by more than 50 organizations, which now meet annually to discuss key challenges. Building Consensus on Standards for Democratic Elections. The Carter Center has played a leading role in building consensus on standards for democratic elections. In 2010, the Center
