WORKS CITED 375

Justification may refer to: Theory of justification, a part of epistemology that attempts to understand the justification of propositions and beliefs. Justification (jurisprudence), defence in a prosecution for a criminal offense. Justification (theology), God's act of declaring or making a sinner righteous before God. Justification (typesetting), a kind of typographic alignment. Formal proof, an object that justifies the validity of a formalized statement. or download with email. de la justification thevenot et Boltanski. Download. de la justification thevenot et Boltanski. Hana Mechichi.Â In any situation, they can equally be invoked by anybody in order to criticize, to justify or to reach an agreement with someone else. Hence it is necessary to study the pragmatics of justification, that is, how people do things with words, ideas, and moral arguments. The economy of worth has two levels: the polity and the common world.
