Office Hours: Wednesdays 11-12:15 and Thursdays 1-3 or by appointment

Course Overview

Drawing upon political science, history, labor economics, sociology, public policy, geography, law and anthropology literatures, this course will explore the phenomenon of immigration to the United States in the twenty-first century with a focus on low wage work and public policy.

The topics we will explore include:

- Who are today's immigrant workers and why do they come
- The history of migration to the U.S.
- The history of migration policy in the U.S.
- Theories about why immigration occurs
- The impact of globalization on immigration
- How U.S. immigration law works
- How immigrants make their way socially, economically and politically in their new communities
- The employment and labor rights of immigrant workers
- Efforts to organize through unions and worker centers to improve wages and working conditions
- Labor Market dynamics: Subcontracting in low wage immigrant-dominated industries
- The current federal, state and local immigration policy debates

Learning objectives:

- Identifying critical assumptions, methods, and types of evidence underlying theoretical arguments advanced by various authors

- Understanding different theoretical perspectives on immigration drawn from political science, economics, sociology, history, anthropology, geography and political theory
- Conducting scholarly research
- Writing an essay that puts forward an argument
- Writing a research paper

Course Requirements

Reading and Reaction papers:

This course meets once a week for three hours. However, I assign a week's worth of reading.

Undergrads: You should budget your time to allow you to get through about 60 pages of reading a week and to write weekly 500 word reaction papers described below. Waiting until the night before might not be the best strategy for accomplishing this!

Masters students: You should budget your time to allow you to get through 60-90 pages of reading a week and to write 600-800 word reaction papers described below. You will see that under the required reading for each week there is a recommended reading/masters student reading, I would like you to choose one or two of these to read as well and write about along with the other articles. Again, waiting until the night before may not be the best strategy for accomplishing this.

Each week, I will post a few broad questions on the readings. The idea is for you to show me that you have done the readings and to react to a few things you read that you found the most striking. You have the option to skip TWO weeks of your choice but please don't skip the reading! Occasionally, I will throw out extra credit questions that you can hand in the following week as well. You must submit the homework on sakai on the day it is due. Please bring a copy of your reaction paper and the readings with you, so we can talk about them. I will accept homework for one week after its due date but will mark down your grade for every day it is late.

Please bring a copy of your written homework answers with you on the day of class so that you can refer to them for our discussion in class.

Paper: Due February 18th: The immigration story of your own family or that of a friend. 8-12 double-spaced pages. I strongly prefer that you do your own family and only do a friend if you are absolutely unable to find any information about your own history.

Questions to cover in your paper:

- Basic background:

When did they come to the United States? Why did they come? How did they come? What federal immigrant or non-immigrant admissions policy enabled them to come? Where did they first arrive, where did they settle? Why did they choose that destination? Did they move again, where and why?

- Employment history:

What was their occupation and employment in their country of origin? What jobs did they take up when they arrived in the United States? How did they get their jobs? Who were their employers? How were they treated? What were their employers' attitudes toward immigrants (and what were their employers' countries of origin)? How long did they stay at each job?

- Associational History:

Did any organizations provide support when they arrived? Did they participate in any organizations after they arrived? Religious institutions, cultural, social, service, unions or political organizations?

- Analysis:

Please discuss what you learned from this assignment and how it has affected the way you think about your own family history and about contemporary immigrants and immigration issues. How would you compare your family's immigration story to the experiences of contemporary immigrant families?

*Going from good to great: Is when you relate your family's story to the larger story of the immigrant group they were a part of or the larger political context of the time—in other words, finding some books or scholarly articles to paint the larger picture.

These papers will be presented (3-5 minute versions) in class on Feb 18th and 25th. These presentations must be brief! Think about the most compelling nuggets of the story that you want to share. Please feel free to utilize any type of artistic media or other multimedia forms (plays, poetry, power-points, photographs, recordings, etc).

Mid-term: This will be a take-home exam. It will be posted on March 4th and must be handed in by midnight on March 10th.

Final: Also a take-home exam. It will be posted on April 29th and will be due by midnight May 6th.

Readings

All of the required articles as well as recommended articles are available on the web through Sakai. Go to the Rutgers sakai site. Click on your degree program. Click on course name. Logon: smlrStudent. Password: smlrStudent.

A small number of the readings are available online and the website is listed for those readings so you can retrieve them.

Grading

Reaction papers	25%
Paper	25%
Mid-term	25%
Final	25%

I fully understand that sometimes students experience serious problems over the course of the semester, which can interfere with their ability to do the work. If you find yourself falling behind, please come and talk to me! It is much harder to be understanding if you simply disappear without an explanation and show up mid-semester or later on looking for help!

Research Project: I am working with the Center for Women and Work, the Rutgers Center on Organizational Innovation and the National Domestic Workers Alliance to conduct the first survey of domestic workers in New Jersey. This project will involve good students who are willing to spend some time outside of class identifying and interviewing domestic workers. Students selected to participate in this project will earn valuable training and research experience as well as significant extra credit. Please notify me if you are interested.

Attendance Policy

Class attendance is mandatory: we only meet once a week and if you miss class, you miss a lot of material. You should have no unexcused absences. After the first unexcused absence, you will be marked down one letter grade per unexcused absence. This means that if you were at a B+ you would receive a B. I am completely serious about this.

If you have to miss class, please ask a classmate to bring you up to date on what you missed.

I expect all students to arrive promptly at the start of class. Students consistently arriving more than 10 minutes late will be penalized and possibly strangled.

Breaks

We will take a 10 minute break every class at 2 pm. I strongly encourage you to eat or drink something during this time! I do! Please don't fall asleep—it is very distracting to me and the other students—if you feel yourself starting to nod off, go get some caffeine or take a walk and come back. It is also fine to eat and drink during class. If you fall asleep, I will ask you to leave, so please don't let it get to that!

A Word about Electronics

I know that some of you take notes on your laptops, so I have never wanted to ban computers in my classroom, but I want your full attention. No surfing the web. No checking Facebook. Cell phones must be silenced. It is distracting for you, for your neighbors, and the height of rudeness for me and for the outside speakers! If it turns out that too many of you are going online during class, I will institute a policy of no laptops in class.
